Reminiscence and Character of Mrs. Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, wife of Commodore Vanderbilt, died last week. We find in an obituary of her the following incident and character showing that Vanderbilt had a good partner in life, and that to her influence probably was due much of his success.

Somewhere about 60 years ago Cornelius Vanderbilt commenced life by running a "perlinger" between Staten Island and New York. During the day he led his vocation, and whenever his duties permitted, visited his second cousin, Miss Sophie Johnson, then a young and comely girl of 16, who also lived on the Island. Perhaps it was the outburst of his first love that made the young sailor so ambitious, and inspired him with the enterprise he has always exhibited. Certain it is, however, that the cousins married, and old folks who knew them then, speak with delight of the handsome pair, for they were admitted to be the comeliest couple Staten Island has ever produced. It is unnecessary to trace the Commodore from the time he was a ferryman, until he was promoted, or more properly, promoted himself, to the responsible position of captain of a steamboat which plied between New York and New Brunswick, N. J. At the latter place, however, he was proprietor of a hotel, at which passengers from New York to Philadelphia used to take meals, and occasionally a night's rest. It was a kind of half-way house. His wife superintended the hotel while he was engaged in his active aquatic vocation. One evening he arrived from New York, and while sitting at supper, said to his wife:

"Sophie, I wish I had $5000, in addition to what I have, to buy shares in the steamboat line; I think it would be a good investment."

"Do you think so, Cornell?" responded his thoughtful partner.

"I do," said he.

She said nothing more, but next day consulted Mr. Gibbons, and he advised the investment. Next evening at supper she accosted her husband thus:

"Cornell, I've spoken to Mr. Gibbons about shares, and as he approves your idea, there's the $5000; buy the shares to-morrow."

As she spoke she took the amount from one of those old fashioned pockets that used to be worn under the dress, and handed it to her astonished husband. She had saved the money unbeknown to him, and it was probably this same money that floated the Commodore into fame and fortune. This incident shows what the woman was. The money was wisely saved, and, as is well known, the harvest is great. The subsequent history of Mr. Vanderbilt is the inheritance of all men; and though the part taken by his wife in building up his immense wealth cannot be made public, yet it is safe to say that with him she bore the burden and heat of the day, and incited him by her cheering and courageous words to embark in great undertakings, and, by her wisdom, conduct them to successful issues.

In her home she was kind and amiable—a true and faithful wife, a fond mother and a firm friend. It was in the sacred precincts of the family circle that she was best known; it was there her good qualities were most apparent and most appreciated; and now that she
